(b) Describe the purpose of a code of conduct.

.....

Solution:

(a)

Term	Description
Copyright	Copyright is a legal right that protects the creator's work by preventing others from copying, distributing, or using it without permission.
Open Source (Initiative)	Open-source software is software whose source code is freely available for anyone to inspect, modify, and redistribute under an open-source license.
Shareware	Shareware is copyrighted software that can be used free on a trial basis or with limited functionality, after which the user must pay to continue using the full version.
Software Licence	A software license is a legal agreement that gives a user permission to use software under specified terms and conditions.

(b)

A code of conduct is a set of rules or ethical guidelines that defines the expected standards of behavior for individuals in an organization or profession. Its purpose is to ensure people act responsibly, professionally, and ethically while carrying out their duties.
